Recognizing and Reporting Elder Abuse

What is Elder Abuse?
In California, elders are defined as persons 65 years and older.
Under California law, elder abuse can be both criminal and civil.

Criminal elder abuse occurs when a person knows that a person is an elder and willfully causes or permits that elder to suffer, or inflicts unjustifiable physical pain or mental suffering on the elder. It also covers situations where a person willfully causes or permits an elder to be placed in a situation in which the elder’s health is endangered. (Penal Code Section 368)

Civil law defines elder abuse as physical abuse, neglect, financial abuse, abandonment, isolation, abduction, or other treatment resulting in harm, pain or mental suffering to an elder. It also means the deprivation by a care custodian of goods or services that are necessary to avoid physical harm or mental suffering. (Welfare & Institutions Code Section 15610.)

- Abandonment: The desertion of an elder by someone who is a caregiver.
- Abduction: The removal, without the consent of the conservator, of a conservatee to another state.
- Financial Abuse: The wrongful taking or use of an elder’s funds, property, or other assets.
- Isolation: The intentional prevention of an elder from receiving mail, telephone calls or visitors.
- Mental Suffering: The infliction of fear, agitation, or confusion through threats, harassment or intimidating behavior.
- Neglect: A caregiver’s failure to assist in personal hygiene, failure to provide food, clothing or shelter, or protect an elder from health and safety hazards, or prevent malnutrition.

The only exception to the duel reporting is when a resident has caused abuse and there was no serious bodily injury. In these instances the reporter shall make the report either to law enforcement or the ombudsmen.
